

The library group has been meeting regularly. The big project we are working on is the donation of Jan Easton's family history research. This is a huge project, and we are grateful for Ken Shilling and Maree Shilling who have come along to work on this. We expect to eventually have a Jan Easton Archive on the shelves in the back room – stay tuned. In addition, Karilyn Pawley is working on a donation of material from Kathy Lynch, another big job. Special thanks to Karilyn.

We are continuing the long-term project of culling journals that are more than 10 years old. All international journals had been finished last year, and we have recently finished all interstate journals. We are now working on NSW journals. The process involves cutting out relevant articles to keep in the PAM file, and continually updating the Subject Index to reflect this.

We have run one session of orientations, and another is scheduled for next month; we are pleased that there are still many people interested in learning their way around our library resources.

We are still raising money for the Society from the sale of used books.
